OHA 302 Siler Collection

Date of Records: 1910-1929

Size: 1 Box

Finding Aid: by Eric W. Boyle (2014)

Series/Scope and Content Note: This collection consists of about 120 photographs belonging to J.F. Siler, U.S. Army Medical Corps. The images show Panama during the building of the canal, including images of mosquito control, drainage, garbage disposal, hospitals, and a leper colony. Siler was director of the Division of Laboratories for the Army Expeditionary Forces during World War I. His contributions to tropical medicine include descriptions of the transmission of dengue and Army policies for typhoid vaccination in World War II. Siler also worked at the Army Medical School (now Walter Reed Army Institute of Research), which holds some of his records. The following list of photographs is taken from an original inventory conducted in 1985, and is arranged alphabetically by subject:
